MONGKONO, TUESDAY, OCTOBER 22, 1895. PROFESSOR R. K. Douglas has been giving the people of England the benefit of his knowledge and experience of China. In a trite letter to The Times he sets forth the six stages of Chinese diplomacy in relation to massacres and outrages upon Foreigners. To China hands, what he states is not novel. Ar the meeting of the British Association at Ipswich on Sapt. 17, a paper on Formosa was read by Mr H. N. Dickson, in the absence of the author, our old friend Mr John Dodd, who gave an account of explorations and observations in the island during his residence there from 1864 to 1890. The mode of life of the savage inhabitants was described, their drass, weapons, methods of hunting, marriage oustoms, &c., -and special reference was made to the practice of head-hunting, whether indulged in from motives of reverge or as a pastime merely. An account was also given of the opening up of foreign trade, especially in campbor, coal, and ten, and an estimate was formed of the commercial resources of Formers and of the prespects of their development. Colonel Godwin Austin pointed out an interesting point to be gathered from the paper, namely-that the tea plant now existed over 125 of longitude, from the Brahmaputra to Fermosa.
